that point in its development enabling it to survey its position and to recognize its importance, has de-manded a review of all previous con-clusions arrived at concerning the nature of property, and has demand-ed that all legal impediments to the free development of its special form of organization shall be forthwith removed.

removed. These demands, then, having been duly considered by many competent minds, both juside and outside the ranks of the technical working class, the general verdict arrived at is that property being social, and not personal, in its origin, must be devoted to social purposes. Cardinal Manning has given a brief historical sketch of the Trade Unions, dating from the middle ages; showing them to be necessary combinations for the protection of the working class. Other able and respected men have with tongue and pen aided the general movement, with the result that the pretended science of political economy, with its anti-social dogma of "supply and demand," has been discredited; and the claims of labor have been endorsed.

The profound sympathy called forth by the great strike of the London dock laborers is sufficient evidence of the great change that has taken place in public opinion; a mental and moral transformation, justifying the belief that a solution of the great problem can be reached in the near future.

But as a grand force is necessary for the realization of any grand idea, the present time calls for the unification of the scattered forces of labor. Organization can only be met with organization.

To make this important fact clear, to show the enduring character of Trade Unions, to complasize the necessity of combination to achieve a common social ideal, has been my object with this epistle. Fully believing that-

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with tharrhoa. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Cham-berlain's Colic, Chelera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon curred him. I consider it the best medicine made and conscientiously recommend it to all who need a diarrhesa or colic medi-cine. J. E. Hare, Trenton, Tex. 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale by all dealers.
